Senior Management Changes Announced at EMSI

Scottsdale, AZ – December 14, 2006 – Examination Management Services, Inc. (EMSI), the leading provider of medical information, risk management and investigative services, announced that Chad Gross, chief information officer, will assume the newly created position of chief operating officer of the Medical Records Retrieval division, and Kevin Malone will be appointed to senior vice president of Underwriting Insurance Services, both reporting to Mark Davis, president and chief executive officer.

"Both Kevin and Chad bring extensive skills and vision to these two new important roles," said Mr. Davis. "I am confident Kevin and Chad's leadership and commitment will further strengthen EMSI's ability to meet both the changing requirements of our existing customers and the opportunities for growth in new markets."

Mr. Gross joined EMSI in 2003 and has served as the company's chief information officer responsible for the vision, strategy, direction, and oversight for Information Technology. As chief operating officer for Medical Records Retrieval, in addition to his current responsibilities, Mr. Gross will oversee litigation services, Premier Solutions and all regional call center-based attending physician statement (APS) functions, focusing on operational excellence and long term growth.

For the last three years, Mr. Malone has managed the company's Medical Records Retrieval business, and in his new role as senior vice president, Underwriting Insurance Services, will lead the sales and operations for all underwriting and inspection services and position the company to continue its growth in these emerging market segments.

The company also announced the promotion of Tom Andersen to vice president of field operations, Medical Records Retrieval, reporting to Mr. Gross. Mr. Andersen will oversee EMSI's Omaha, Pittsburgh and Jacksonville call center operations.

Messrs. Gross', Malone's and Andersen's newly appointed roles will become effective January 1, 2007.
