He will be based in Chicago, IL and will report to Robert Brook, EMSI's executive vice president and chief development officer.

To further align the division to heighten focus on core capabilities around these targeted market segments, Terry Savage, chief underwriter, will now report to Chad Gross, chief information officer and chief operating officer, Medical Records Retrieval division and will work closely with Mr. Miller in meeting customer needs. The changes will enhance EMSI's position in the high-growth underwriting services industry and emphasize service delivery by concentrating sales, operations and customer support into focused units.

"With Bob's proven sales leadership and extensive background in underwriting and financial services, he will clearly be an excellent addition to our existing team of industry-leading underwriting professionals," said Mark Davis, president and chief executive officer of EMSI. "Terry's unmatched underwriting expertise and expansive industry experience has brought EMSI's Underwriting division into the leadership position it is today. We look forward to seeing the combined talents of Terry and Bob capitalize on the synergies between our business segments, enhancing our ability to cross-sell our diversified product lines to existing clients while creating new revenue streams in emerging markets."

To support its significant business and strategic growth in the Underwriting division, EMSI is opening a new dedicated underwriting and fulfillment facility near its current 68,000 square foot call center operations in Waco, TX. The additional first-class facility will house the division's client support, operations and technology support teams.
